

JAMAIS JE NE L'OUBLIERAI

The French contribution to the development of Alberta goes back to the very beginning of Alberta. French was the first European language spoken in the Province. The more than 500 names of French origin which can still be found in Alberta are a reminder of the importance of this contribution to the development not only of the towns and villages presented on this map but to the development of the province as a whole.

Fort McMurray

The title "Jamais je ne t'oublierai" (Never will I forget) was taken from "A la claire fontaine", an old French song which was formally entitled "La chanson des voyageurs". The song originated in France and was brought West by the coureurs des bois and the first French explorers. This love song was later used by the voyageurs as a means of expressing their sense of belonging to and their love for "La Nouvelle-France".

More space would have allowed us to include towns like Balzac, Cluny, Castor, Breynat, Bassano, Lille, and Grande Cache. We would also have liked to give more information about the towns we did mention.

For more information about the history of the Francophones in Alberta and to find the complete bibliography of the resources used to complete this project, the reader is invited to consult Dr. France Levasseur-Ouimet's book entitled "D'année en année" published in 2003. This book can be found at Le Carrefour, the francophone bookstore in Edmonton.

This historical map is a project of the Association canadienne-française de l'Alberta (ACFA) and was completed by professors Carol Léonard and France Levasseur-Ouimet Ph.D from Faculté Saint-Jean, U of A in 2005 in order to mark Alberta's centennial. Proofreader: Marcel Lavallée. Lime Design Inc of Edmonton is responsible for the graphic layout and the printing was done by DeJong Printing.
